

Going from Thinking to Knowing What Works

August 2, 2016

Workshop #004-17

GRREC Office & Training Facility • 230 Technology Way • Bowling Green, KY

The Green River Regional Educational Cooperative is excited to present Going from Thinking to Knowing What Works with John Antonetti, Nicole Law and John Almarode. School and district leaders will learn the engaging qualities to increase student engagement, how to analyze data to make instructional changes that will maximize student learning, and how to incorporate the right amount of rigor for building deep-thinking students.

John Antonetti has visited classrooms throughout North America in an effort to answer the question "What truly engages learners?" From thousands of students in pre-K through Graduate School, John has learned three facets of powerful learning tasks-intellectual, academic, and emotional engagement. John is currently working with GRREC's own, Terri Stice, along with other colleagues on a book about the power of technology to engage learners.

Nicole Law is a former elementary school principal and is currently a consultant with Houghton Mifflin Harcourt (HMH). She has worked on implementation of Data Teams in some of the Leading to Learn schools in the GRREC region. Nicole has worked with many schools to help them develop a system of data analysis that drives improvements in student achievement.

John Almarode is a consultant with Corwin who addresses a variety of topics including student engagement, evidence-based practices, creating enriched environments that promote learning, and designing classrooms with the brain in mind. John's action-packed workshops offer participants ready-to-use strategies and the brain rules that make them work.
